Dear Mr. Monti,

Letters like yours mean much to me. To date they are the only external reward. They are encouraging when little else is. For whatever it may mean to you, I am continuing my work. I have never stopped. However, publication is still not the likely prospect for the kind of work I do.

Please note the address to which we moved more than six years ago. Mail is no longer forwarded to us. We got your letter because someone brought it to us.

I have two other books. Oswald in New Orleans, an original reprint that sold at 95¢, is out of print. I was paid nothing for it. I do have a few copies. However, I must get for them the cost of replacing them by xerox, $20. I enclose a flyer on the other.

The three Whitewash books go with this.

Many thanks for your kind words. They do mean much.

Sincerely,
